

Program “Knowledge, Understanding, and the Sciences”

	Thursday 18 Salle de la Fresque, D306 (Sorbonne)	Friday 19 Salle de la Fresque, D306 (Sorbonne)	Saturday 20 Salle Dussane (École Normale Supérieure)
12h45-14h05	Timothy Williamson (University of Oxford) Why Knowledge is First	Catherine Elgin (Harvard University) Iterative Explication	Adrian Currie (University of Exeter) How to imagine a lost world: artifactualism, paleoart and fossils
14h05 - 14h20	Break
14h20-15h40	Pascal Engel (EHESS) Primitivism about belief, knowledge and understanding	Lucas Escobar (ENS-PSL) Rayan Geha (Sorbonne Université) Can understanding be knowledge-first?	Isabelle Drouet (Sorbonne Université) Describing and assessing inductive inferences in the deep past sciences: A Schumian approach
15h40-17h00	Jean-Baptiste Rauzy (Sorbonne Université) TBD	Cyrille Imbert (Université de Lorraine - CNRS) K-Understanding: Toward a Gradable, Resource-Sensitive Account of Understanding	Philippe Huneman (IHPST - CNRS) Explaining and understanding: a place for narratives in evolutionary biology
17h00-17h15	Break
17h15-18h35	Mona Simion (University of Oxford) On purism	Michael Strevens (New York University) Grasp of Explanations and Grasp of Meaning	Aviezer Tucker (Ostrava University & Harvard University) The Generation of Knowledge of the Past